BY THEIR BEARDS WE CAN TELL 'EM

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Beards, whiskers, mustaches! Those three things would wreck the conference on limitation of armament if the conferees ever should try to standardize them. For every delegation has a different idea—and unhesitatingly proclaims it to the world.

Take Hughes, kinsman of the parley. He believes in an open beard, openly arrived at. Bushy whiskers, upturned mustache, but both neatly parted in the middle. Like this—

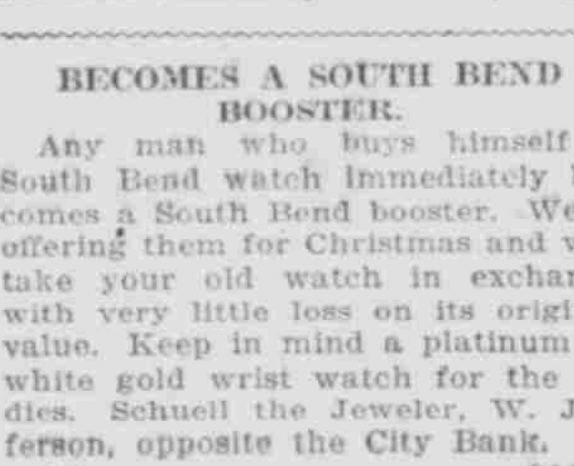

Not so Carlo Schanzer, Italian delegate. He would say: "Si, si, Signore Hughes is right about so extent of facial vegetation—but no method of cultivation, non, non. Let us whiskers run wild, luxuriant, unrestrained by comb or brush."

And Schanzer wears this—

"They're both wrong," thinks Sir John Salmond, British delegate. "A full beard's the thing. But it must be moved down frequently till it looks like a well-kept lawn. Like mine—"

BECOMES A SOUTH BEND BOOSTER. Any man who buys himself a South Bend watch immediately becomes a South Bend booster. We're offering them for Christmas and will take your old watch in exchange with very little loss on its original value. Keep in mind a platinum or white gold wrist watch for the ladies. Schnell the Jeweler, W. Jefferson, opposite the City Bank.

You'd call it kaiserliche, if he weren't French. Le Vola—

But Baron de Carrière de Marchienne, Belgian delegate, believes in more luxuriant lip foliage. Beginning five millimetres below the nostrils, each wing should curve gently downward in a ram's horn effect, he thinks.

And when you get to Chung Hui Wang, Chinese conferee, you get very near zero in face underbrush. He wears a scanty fringe of thin, wiry whiskers that look like sparse cactus on a western American desert.

GERMAN DOLLAR TAKES NEW FLOP. By Associated Press. BERLIN, Dec. 1.—The fall in the price of the dollar was further accentuated Thursday with a corresponding reaction on the stock market, where panic offerings of stock produced a general break in price levels.

Quotations in many cases slumped precipitately. Several banks suffered enormous losses and serious complications are feared.

After the official close of the exchange the dollar recovered somewhat on a rumor that in return for a moratorium, the allies would insist on such severe conditions that the German government would find itself unable to accept them.

CORN STILL KING OF U. S. FARM PRODUCTS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Corn is still king of American farm products in point of money value.

The census bureau, in a statement Thursday night, placed corn at the head of a list of 26 leading crops in 1919 with a total value of $2,507,797,192 out of an aggregate value for the whole list of about $12,750,000,000.

Next in order of value were: hay and forage, $2,523,000,000; cotton and cotton seed $2,355,000,000; wheat $2,074,000,000 and oats $555,000,000.
